ABSTRACT

Institutional data are presented which reflect five-year trends in the characteristics of Central College, a two-year institution established by members of the Free Methodist Church of North America in 1884. Data tables present a profile of the faculty with figures for 1972 through 1977 for the following: number and characteristics of full- and part-time teachers; faculty retention rates; salaries; and annual and departmental faculty-student ratios. Admissions and enrollments are summarized in terms of new student applications and admissions, 1972-1976; a five-year student enrollment profile; state or country of origin; number of students in campus residence halls; religious preferences; student retention rates; and student career choices. Additional tables summarize the following information related to the academic program: freshmen American College Testing (ACT) composite scores; class size summary; credit hours earned by instructional division; credit hours taught by full-time equivalent faculty; comparison of courses represented in the college catalog and in the class schedules; divisional enrollments; total graduates; and graduation summary comparisons. The following aspects of the college's financial resources are considered: institutional operations income and expenditures, annual balance sheet, endowment fund summary, student financial aid, annual charges to students, and annual fund gift income summary. PURPOSES AND OBJECTIVES

Central College, a two-year collegiate institution, was established by members of the Free Methodist Church of North America.

Central College brings together groups of people: students, faculty, administrators, staff, to engage in the struggles and rewards of learning and experiencing. Credits are granted and evaluations recorded; however, its purposes are fulfilled more through the interaction of the persons involved, most of whom acknowledge the Lordship of Jesus Christ.

The school is committed to creating an ongoing atmosphere conducent to the spiritual, intellectual, social, and physical health and maturation of the individuals involved. It purposes to assist and encourage the formulation of a personal faith and value system integrative and dynamic in nature.
